

'Deaf Heritage' impact still felt after five years

Five years after publication of Deaf Heritage: A Narrative History of Deaf America, author Jack Gannon, executive director of Alumni Relations and Advancement, continues to be asked, "When are you going to write another one?"

Acclaimed by many as the most comprehensive book on the subject, Deaf Heritage has also proven popular. More than 14,000 copies have been sold since its publication in January 1981.

In his introduction to the book, special assistant to the president Dr. Mervin Garretson wrote, "It is hoped that Deaf Heritage is but a beginning of a continuing compilation and closer examination of the impact of deafness on persons, their achievements and their traditions."

Gannon said that judging from the amount of mail that continues to cross his desk every day, many people took Dr. Garretson's words seriously. Gannon continues to collect material for an updated, revised edition.

"But history is an ongoing thing," said Gannon. "Recording it can't be the job of one person. I'm ready to let someone else take over."

The book was the brainchild of Gary Olsen, now the president of the National Association of the Deaf (NAD), and Gannon was his choice to write it. "Looking back," said Olsen, "I am very pleased that I made the effort to get Jack to do this great piece of work. It has enriched our culture and instilled a greater sense of pride in our heritage." Olsen added that the book "has made a significant contribution to the education of deaf people all over America."

Dr. Jerry C. Lee and Chile's Sofia Torey Daughters at signing of agreement.

College signs agreement with Chile for scientific & technical cooperation

On Jan. 7, President Jerry C. Lee signed an agreement for the development of a scientific and technical cooperation program between Gallaudet College and the Special Education Department of Chile's Metropolitan University for Educational Sciences and the Center for Educational Training, Experimentation and Research of Chile's Ministry of Education.

The agreement, the result of more than a year of effort by representatives of both Chile and Gallaudet, is designed to provide a three-year program encompassing research, training of professionals and joint seminars between the College and Chile.

Also present at the signing were Eli Savanick, director of the International Center on Deafness (ICD); Silvia Golocovsky, resource specialist for ICD; Yarker Andersson, president of the World Federation of the Deaf and professor of sociology; Mervin Garretson, special assistant to the president; and Sofia Torey Daughters, an advisor representing the Technical Institute for deaf young adults and the deaf community in Chile.

Under the agreement, Gallaudet will provide experts for training courses and seminars in Chile and offer assistance in the development of a research project on sign language codification for deaf people in that country.

The agreement also calls for the establishment of five scholarships to Gallaudet for members of the Special Education Department of Metropolitan University, focusing on prevention, early detection and diagnosis of hearing loss; education programs for parents of deaf children; curriculum on the education of hearing impaired children at the preschool and basic levels; care for disabled individuals with hearing impediments; and vocational and professional training for deaf individuals.

Resources for the cooperative agreement are being sought from national and international organizations.

NICD developing career directory to aid networking

Next fall, if all goes according to plan, hearing impaired individuals employed in professional, technical and managerial occupations will have access to a directory of their peers.

Organizers of the Career Information Registry of Hearing Impaired People, a project of the National Information Center on Deafness (NICD), will be mailing out preliminary questionnaires this month to 500 hearing impaired people in Boston, Mass. and metropolitan Washington, D.C. to establish an initial database.

Dennis Finnegan, project coordinator, said that he and Loraine DiPietro, director of both NICD and the registry project, will travel to the capitals of Massachusetts, Illinois and Georgia and to Los Angeles, Calif., to train information volunteers—professionals in fields related to deafness and hearing impairment. The volunteers will assist in advertising the benefits of the registry and encourage their clients to participate.

Bulk mailings will go out in late February or early March to pilot sites in Massachusetts, Illinois, Georgia, California and the District of Columbia. Finnegan said he anticipates that the majority of registrants would be entered and the first issue of a directory completed by this fall.

"We're hoping to produce a directory which will contain the person's name, position, degree or certification and age of onset of hearing impairment," said Finnegan. "It will also identify hearing impaired persons willing to serve as consultants, speakers, contact people or other resources. The directory will

SLIGE classes to begin Feb. 17

Sign language classes for Gallaudet employees (SLIGE) are scheduled to begin the week of Feb. 17 and end May 2 with a spring break March 18-22.

Offered by the Department of Sign Communication, the 10-week classes will include Beginning I, Beginning II and Intermediate I.

To join a class, employees must complete the registration form available in Kendall Hall on Thursday and Friday, Feb. 13 and 14, between 9 a.m. and noon. If deemed necessary, evaluations may also take place at that time.

Each class requires a minimum enrollment of six students or the class will be cancelled. Information concerning class times and locations will be provided at registration.

Letters requesting that classes be held within a department should be addressed to the coordinator of the program, Lynn Jacobowitz, Kendall Hall. For more information about the SLIGE program, call her office, x5633.

Some of the hundreds of boxes of microfilmed source material donated by Dr. Harlan Lane.

Author Harlan Lane donates materials from 10 years of research for book

The Gallaudet archives is now the repository for 100,000 pages of materials on the history of deafness accumulated by Harlan Lane in 10 years of research for his book, "When the Mind Hears."

"This collection is a valuable donation to the College," said archivist David de Lorenzo. "Harlan Lane wanted copies of all the papers he used in his work made available to researchers throughout the world, and he wanted them here at Gallaudet. Thanks to Lane, Gallaudet now has copies of original materials written by Laurent Clerc, Abbe Sicard, Abbe de l'Epee and other pioneers in the education of deaf persons."

Lane discussed donating copies of his source material for "When the Mind Hears" with President Jerry C. Lee during the Gallaudet College Alumni reunion last June; Lane was visiting the College to speak at the Laurent Clerc Bicentennial celebration and autograph copies of his book.

De Lorenzo met with Lane last fall in Boston to arrange transfer of the collection to the College. The photocopies of Lane's source documents and notes fill 36 file cabinet drawers.

Included in the collection are copies of materials belonging to Clerc Galloway, the great-great-granddaughter of Laurent Clerc. Galloway agreed to share these materials with Lane when they met here during the bicentennial celebration.

In his book, Lane illustrates the influence of the European deaf community on the community of deaf people in the U.S.

"Before the establishment of educational institutions in the U.S. there was no deaf community in the U.S. as we now know it," said de Lorenzo. "Lane's materials and information are important for scholars and other persons interested in tracing the historical bond that exists between French and American deaf people."

The donated materials are accessible now.

KDES students compete in festival

KDES was a flurry of activity in November and December as students, helped by faculty and staff, were busy with tryouts for the International Creative Arts Festival (ICAF).

The annual event is sponsored by the Center on Deafness in Des Plaines, Ill. This is the 10th anniversary of the competition, and the first year it is an international competition.

The festival is open to hearing impaired children from elementary school (age 6) through college, and includes three regional competitions. Regional winners compete in the international contest.

According to Al Couthen, KDES assistant principal and coordinator of the event, students were allowed to compete in two of three categories—art, writing and talent.

KDES winners included 7 students in the art category, 17 in the writing category and 30 in the talent category.

Regional judging will take place next month and international judging will be completed in March. International winners will receive a trip to Chicago in April to receive their cash awards and ribbons at a special banquet.

Couthen said he was pleased that so many students were eligible to compete, and he offered a special note of thanks to KDES staff, teachers and parents who helped prepare students for the competition.

In the past, KDES students have done well at the ICAF, and Couthen hopes that this year will be no exception.

College exhibit program gets boost from campus committee of advisors

Freight companies know about it. UPS delivery persons know about it. Conference planners know about it. National association presidents know about it.

But, according to Barbara Caldwell, exhibit coordinator and public relations associate, many Gallaudet faculty and staff don't know about the College's exhibit program.

Caldwell said that Pete Moran, the former exhibit coordinator, "made friends for the College all over the nation. Everywhere we go, conference coordinators and exhibitors ask about Pete, and they know something about Gallaudet's programs."

"Pete effectively shared information about our programs and services with professionals at conferences for almost 10 years, but many Gallaudet people didn't know about it," said Caldwell.

Caldwell assumed her new responsibilities under Public Relations director Donna Chitwood last July. She asked for volunteers from each of the academic schools, student affairs units and the marketing areas of the College to advise her and the Public Relations office on the exhibit program.

The volunteers formed an ongoing advisory committee that meets four times a year to provide input about Gallaudet materials and academic programs and to critique the exhibit schedule. The expanded goals of the program for 1986 indicate a need to attend more conferences directly related to deaf people and to introduce several new test constituencies.

"The exhibit program promotes name recognition for some groups, lends support to our own faculty members when they participate in meetings of national associations within their disciplines and complements our recruitment program," said Caldwell. "We hope to attend more conferences of professionals who are in direct contact with deaf students and teachers who see them in the mainstream."

Materials and services promoted at the conferences reflect the input of the campus-wide committee and are selected for the specific audience at that meeting. Ideally, Gallaudet presenters and participants should contribute to the materials selection, and program personnel should visit the exhibit during the conference.

The first such coordinated event took place at last fall's national ASHA convention when Dr. Patrick Cox, Dr. Catherine Andersen and Judy Bergan held poster sessions at the Gallaudet exhibit in the Washington Hilton Hotel. The booth, staffed by Gallaudet College Press and PreCollege Outreach personnel, displayed products and presented a videotape program planned by the Gallaudet TV Department.

Dr. Marin Allen represents the TV Department on the exhibit advisory committee, and her staff selected educational and entertaining short tapes appropriate for speech and hearing professionals. "The videotapes fascinated hundreds of ASHA participants who squeezed through the aisles in the exhibit area," said Caldwell. "The program was designed for that audience, and the response was gratifying."

If any faculty or staff member plans to attend a major conference, please inform Caldwell, x5108. The exhibit coordinator is located in the Public Relations office in the old "boiler room," the Learning Center Annex—next to the dance studio in Hughes Gym. The entrance is off the mall area.

Director of Publications Lolly Gilbert with the IABC award.

IABC chapter honors Lolly Gilbert

Lolly Gilbert, the College's director of publications, received the "Communicator of the Year" award from the Washington chapter of the International Association of Business Communicators (IABC) last month.

Gilbert received an engraved plaque in recognition of her "outstanding contribution" to the local chapter. In addition to other IABC responsibilities during 1985, Gilbert co-chaired the association's mid-Atlantic regional conference in October.

She is currently serving as vice president for finance ("a fancy name for treasurer," she says) of the Washington chapter, which has a membership of approximately 300 communication and public relation professionals.

act as a tool to help hearing impaired people network among themselves.

"After we publish the first directory we then hope to have the capability to become a national directory," Finnegan continued. He and DiPietro are currently developing a videotaped program to train information volunteers in other states.

Funds for the compilation of the registry are being provided by the Leslie and William Seltzer League for Deaf Children. Finnegan said that the money will also enable NICD to hire an occupational analyst to analyze the registration forms so they can be categorized. "We are using the U.S. Department of Labor's occupational titles so we can compare the level of training against national norms," he said.

The American Association for Advancement of Science (AAAS) and Self Help for Hard of Hearing People, Inc. (SHHH) "have both been extremely helpful in furthering the development of the registry," said Finnegan.

The Career Information Registry will not function as a job matching or placement service, at least not at first. "The registry has a great deal of networking capability for deaf and hearing impaired individuals. And its long-term goal doesn't make it impossible for it to serve as a job matching service. It can go in several different directions," he said.

Participants can choose a confidential registration or a directory registration. Registrants must be hearing impaired and must be employed in professional, technical or managerial fields.

Anyone wanting information, or any person in a pilot state wanting a registration form, can call NICD, x5109 (V/TDD). Those wishing to serve as information volunteers should call the same number.

Gallaudet Today seeks reviewers

Gallaudet Today is looking for book reviewers for the following books:

- SLR '83 (Sign Language Research), edited by William Stokoe and Virginia Volterra. Silver Spring, Md.: Linstock Press, 1985.
- Turning Points in the Education of Deaf People, by Edward L. Scouter. Danville, Ill.: Interstate Printers and Publishers, 1984.
- Cognition, Education and Deafness, edited by David S. Martin. Washington, D.C.: Gallaudet College Press, 1985.
- Functional Anatomy of Speech, Language, and Hearing: A Primer, by William H. Perkins and Raymond D. Kent. San Diego: College-Hill Press, 1986.
- Treating Auditory Processing Difficulties in Children, by Christine Sloan. San Diego: College-Hill Press, 1986.
- Comprehensive Reference Manual for Signers and Interpreters, 2nd Edition, by Cheryl M. Hoffman. Springfield, Ill.: Charles C. Thomas, 1985.

The deadline for reviews is March 4. Reviewers may keep the books they review. Contact Ben Schowe Jr., MSSD English Department, to see the books, or call x5801 to leave a message. Books may be sent to the prospective reviewer for examination before commitment.

College Day Care Center growing, changing, like the children it serves

The Gallaudet College Day Care Center, like the population it serves, is active and growing.

Since it began operation in September 1984, the center has increased in size, staff and services and has changed in physical appearance.

Originally an open-spaced environment that accommodated 44 children of Gallaudet employees and students, the center now has four self-contained classrooms where up to 60 children receive quality day care by 10 staff members.

A self-supporting unit of Gallaudet, the center is licensed through the

Students get help at Career Center

The Gallaudet College Career Center is entering its second semester of operation after a period of extensive program redevelopment and expansion.

The Career Center provides career development services to all presently enrolled degree-seeking students and alumni. The primary objective of the center is to assist students in setting career goals and obtaining employment commensurate with those goals.

Under the direction of Sue Pressman, the Career Center staff offers the following services:

- Individual career and job placement counseling;
- small group counseling;
- computerized career guidance;
- career interest testing;
- career counseling for multihandicapped students;
- job announcement books;
- job listings mailing;
- part-time and summer jobs;
- an alumni resource file;
- on-campus recruiting;
- a career information center;
- a credential file service;
- workshops on specific career/employment related topics; and
- job development.

The center also develops and maintains information about labor market trends, curriculum needs and other areas of importance to help students and alumni meet their vocational goals.

For more information about the Career Center's programs and services, call Sue Pressman, x5643, or visit the center in Ely Center.

District of Columbia Department of Human Services. A program coordinator, four teachers, four teacher assistants and one teacher aide make up the staff.

The center offers comprehensive day care for children between the ages of 2 and 5 years in the preschool program and for children between the ages of 6 and 12 in the before and after school program.

Open to both hearing impaired and hearing children, the programs follow an academically-oriented curriculum that focuses on growth in languages and cognition, gross and fine motor development, and social, emotional and aesthetic development. The curriculum is designed to meet the individual needs of each child. Children are encouraged to proceed at their own rate.

The center is located in the recently renovated Appleby Building at the corner of Florida Avenue and Sixth Street. The buildings and playground areas are arranged to meet the curriculum goals and needs of the children.

Among the benefits children receive from the program are

- experience in a multicultural environment,
- computer experience,
- breakfast and snack/beverage served with lunch,
- educational field trips,
- sign language instruction and
- opportunities for family environment.

A Day Care Center registration form will be printed in a later edition of On the Green.

For more information, contact the center's program coordinator, Henrietta Capers, x5707.

News to be captioned

"This Week With David Brinkley," ABC News' Sunday morning program, is now closed captioned.

The Pew Memorial Trust of Philadelphia, established in 1948, and ABC Television will jointly fund the captioning. "This Week with David Brinkley" becomes the only regularly scheduled, closed captioned network television program on Sundays outside of prime time.

Captioning for the program, now in its fifth season, began with the Jan. 5 show.

'Deaf Heritage' influence grows

Deaf, the timing of the book was appropriate in view of the "problem arising from the fragmentation of deaf education into smaller isolated parts (and) the loss or dilution of deaf heritage and culture into an amalgam of today's community-based special education model. There is little doubt that this problem occurs as an outcome of PL 94-142."

The book has spurred the initiation of workshops based on the book and annual "Deaf Heritage Weeks" in schools for deaf students and in numerous public libraries throughout the nation.

Deaf Heritage has also served the increasing demand for classes in deaf studies. In 1984 Felicia Mode Alexander and Gannon co-authored Deaf Heritage: A Student Text and Workbook which is now used in schools for deaf students across the U.S. Gannon has received several requests for translation of Deaf Heritage into foreign languages, including French, Japanese and Swedish. Braille copies are already available.

Classwork leads to Hispanic group

What began as a class project for Gallaudet students Quito and Jackie Padilla is now one of the College's newest organizations—a support group of Hispanic students.

"When I arrived here I faced two different culture shocks—deaf culture and eastern coast culture," said Quito Padilla, who grew up in California. "I knew there were other Hispanic students, and I wondered if they felt the same."

For their sociology of deafness class, the Padilla cousins decided to do a survey of Hispanic Gallaudet students. One goal was to identify issues that might account for the low number of Hispanics at Gallaudet.

"Many Hispanic students withdraw from Gallaudet because they have no support group," said Quito Padilla. "People tend to label Hispanic people negatively. We needed an organization to educate people about us and our culture. Also, deaf Hispanic people need to know about other deaf Hispanic people here."

Both Padillas are Californians with roots in New Mexico. Quito is Mexican and Jacqueline is Spanish. Quito was instrumental in founding similar organizations in California, at Mount San Antonio Community College and at Rio Hondo Community College.

For Hispanic people, the family is very important, Padilla explained. Hispanic customs and habits are culturally unique. "There are some characteristics that are common to Hispanic people that deaf students from institutional schools do not have," said Padilla. "That is why it is hard for us to adjust."

The first meeting of Hispanic students was held Dec. 5. The group plans to meet twice a month during the spring semester and hold a cultural event sometime in May. "The Gallaudet community can benefit from our organization's events," said Quito Padilla. "We hope to show that we are here. We may be culturally different, but we are deaf, too."

You and Your Job

SPECIAL THANKS: The Personnel Office would like to thank everyone involved with processing this year's Functional Area Adjustment PAFs. The spirit of teamwork and cooperation was deeply appreciated and made the job much easier.

HEALTH INSURANCE REFUNDS: For those of you who are expecting a refund on your 1985 health insurance premium, progress has been made in that direction. Legislation authorizing the payments was approved by the House and Senate last month and was on President Reagan's desk awaiting his signature last week.

Administration officials are confident the President will sign the refund package. At that time, the health plans will send out notices about the rebates—ranging from $20 to $400—and the checks will probably be mailed in February.
